It is a metaphor for everyone who – like Fabre, other artists, philosophers and scientists – strives for higher, unattainable goals such as absolute beauty. 'The man who measures the clouds' is a tribute to Fabre's dead brother Emile and is based on a childhood photo that was modified using ageing techniques. Fabre also found inspiration in the story of Robert Stroud, 'The Birdman of Alcatraz', who, sentenced to life imprisonment, is said to have said that he wanted to dedicate himself to measuring clouds.
